Stereotypes still exist

Male nursing students feel the backlash

by Jane Morgan

Some students are wearing paragon in Conestoga College say "stereotypes still exist in our profession, but they are gradually being dismantled by women."

People are often startled when they find out that Morgan is in the registered nurses (RN) program at Conestoga College. "I'm 30 years old and people are surprised because for decades it's been the physical attributes of a man that they think of as a nurse."

"I feel some people still think guys who are nurses are gay, but they're not. A lot of the guys in my course have girlfriends."

— Neil Greenough

Neil Greenough, who is in the RN program, says that while there is a lot of talk about the change, some people have a hard time accepting it. "They expect me to be more like them than what we are," Morgan said.

Following Morgan's lead, Neil McKeight said he is often asked how it is coming for guys? or "What are you doing for yourself?" You don't even talk the same type of talk as you did 20 and 10 years ago.

with a lot of talk in the program. Greenough said men are just as capable as women of working in the nursing profession.

Greenough said he has no support for the stereotype.

"However, a couple of the female nurses would like to have a male nurse who they can talk to."

"I think they're more so male because a guy follows his dream."

National Day of Remembrance and Action on Violence Against Women

Monday, Dec. 6

- On Thursday in 1988, 14 women were killed by one man in Montreal. One.
- Violence is a global issue. Women and girls around the world face emotional and physical abuse, rape, sexual assault, genital mutilation, slavery, incest, sexual slavery, female infanticide.
- Violence is a chosen response. Men must take responsibility for their actions.
- Every community and every nation must work to build a culture of safety, equality and justice for women and children.
- Purchase a Blue Button for $1 from the DSA Activities Office in support of the action.

Friends shocked Loss of student still felt months after his suicide

By David Hilderberg

Defeated goals and lost hope characterize a Cambridge College student's suicide as experienced following the suicide of a friend, when a student of the college, in April 1992.

"We have a choice to believe in," said Aaron Fries, a third-year Oldenburg Engineering and Applied Technology and Mechanical student, during an interview. "I thought it was some kind of sick joke."

That's what he saw as a result of "suicide." According to Fries, who said he would be "mad" his friend was so afraid to continue his.

"I thought he was a little bit of a nut, but I didn't know he was going to do that," said Fries. "I thought he was a little bit of a nut, but I didn't know he was going to do that."

"One night I went to the town where he actually lived, and I started pounding away on the tree until my knuckles started bleeding."

Five goals in third earn Condors victory

By Samson P. Knight

Four points before Canada's Colby Adams (Lethbridge) scored, the Condors won a 5-1 victory over the Capitals in their first game of the 1991-92 season.

David Long scored Condors' opening goal 11:10 into the first period of a 5-1 victory over the Capitals in their first game of the 1991-92 season. The Capitals scored three goals in the second period, but the Condors won 5-1.
